to wait. The sheriff was back soon, glassy-eyed and, for a long time, speechless. Then, staring at Gein, the sheriff rattled off the gruesome trophies he had found in Ed's farmhouse: Bracelets made of human skin, four human noses in a cup on the kitchen table, a pair of human lips on a string dangling from a windowsill, two human shin bones, strips of human skin bracing four chairs, a tom-tom made from a coffee can with human skin stretched over top and bottom, a pair of leggings made from human skin, skin from a woman's torso converted into a vest, nine death masks—the skinned faces of women—mounted on the walls, ten heads belonging to women sawed off above the eyebrows, another head converted into a soup bowl, and a purse with handles made of human skin.

The refrigerator was stocked with human organs, frozen. A human heart was in a pan on the stove. As near as the sheriff could figure, the various pieces of bodies added up to fifteen dead women, maybe more.

THE MALLOCAUS T CONTINUES!

Revenge of THE MALL ZOMBIES!

A SUMMARY OF LAST ISSUE'S GRAND MALL SEIZURES:

OUR two heroes, Jimi Hendrix and Attorney General Edwin Meese, rushed into Oxmoor shopping mall wielding guns and "deadly gas-blower. As Meese's automa tic rained bul s upon a herd of hapless young mallqueens, Hendrix busied him self with removing (via lethal cyanide gas) some rad skaters who had rushed to the scene. The massacre continued until the mall was pure, leaving the perpetr ators basking in the gory glory of their acheivement. Now, LET'S SEE WHAT HAPPENS

Suddenly, Meese and Hendrix became aware of a deep, rhythmic pounding from somewhere far beneath the floor of the mall. They stopped their gloating laughte and looked around with a wild look of terror in their eyes. The pulsations grew louder and the two noticed a sickening twitching start up in the bloodied carcasse of the mall's dead. Cold hands began to flap limply against the tiles. A few bodies at the top of the stairs and escalators, dislodged from their perches by their frantic unholy flopping, came tumbling head over heels down the steps to lie shaking at the bottom. Some people had fallen into the fountains when they were shot, and the force of their corpse's agitation now caused the crimson water to boil and seetne. The stench of blood and urine and excrement filld the air.

Meese began to retch all over his nice pin stripe suit. Terrorstricken Jimi, all bugeyed and stuff, racked with gastrointestinal pain, as a result of the boring picnic he and Meese had enjoyed the day before, when they were nappy and KK free and totally unaware of the grisly turn for the worse that was fast bearing down upn them like a ton of bricks, wet his purple bellbottoms. They could stand the raw carnage, but noww... Now they were no longer in control.

The resonant punding grew louder, and mingled with it now were the sepulchral wneezings of air being pushed from hundreds of dead lungs. Some of the corpses began a terrible inhuman rituall-- sitting up with the forse of their convulsing muscles, all the while twitching fitfully, then slamming back down again, leaving red smudges where their heads nit the floor.

The bodies began writning and sliding across the ground, tumbling over each other and rolling. The subterranean throbbing was almost deafening. Corpses began to rise into the air with awful jerking motions. A shower of blood like a rainstorm inspring, began it's pitter patter on the tile, on the storewin dows, and on the gaping, upturned faces of Hendrix and Meese. It was the rustling noises that the dead made as they began to spin through the air that finally roused our heroes into action. They ran towards the nearest door, ducking with a yell as the twisting (and well dressed) XXXXXXX body of a Ballard student whistled overnead.

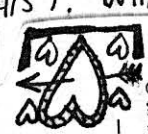

Meese turned around just as they reached the door. The scene before him was one of chaos. All of the carcasses, still twitching, were hurtling in toward the main concourse and spiralling upwards as if caught in the Whirlwind Pyramid that those caped Japanese cartoon characters create on G-Force. The bodies were concen trating at some point in the air just below the mezzanine. The most unspeakable image, however, the one that nearly snapped poor old Ed's mind, was that the formerly entropic mas s of shivering cadavers was condensing, transmogrifying into a distinct form-- a form so horrific in its simplicity that the recognition reduced Meese to a sate of catatonia. Hendrix managed to dgag the stuporous official through the door as the mall began to rumble behind them...

What had Meese seen that turned his brain into a palpitating pile of primal protoplasmic plastic? Would our precious mall remain safe and sound? And what, OH WHAT, was making that infernal pounding noise????!!!!

'Studios, church-going teen charged in ax slaying of his family'

ROCHESTER, Minn. — A teenager was charged yesterday with the ax slaying of his parents, a brother and a sister as authorities and friends puzzled for a key to the sudden change in the studios, church-going youth.

David Brom, 16, who shaved the sides of his head and fashioned his hair into spiked punk style the day of the slayings.

Each victim had been hit in the head at least once, the sheriff said. Bernard and Rick Brom's bodies were found in an upstairs bedroom.

According to the complaint: "One person indicated that on Feb. 17, David Brom said he was going to kill his parents that night, and another person indicated that she had a telephone conversation with David Brom on Feb. 18 during which he told her he had killed his parents."

"There's no indication there was any difficulty in the family," said the Rev. Syl Brown of the Pax Christi Catholic Church. "It's an exemplary family... very active in every aspect of the parish." Brom attended church every week, he said.

"One student said he was having trouble with his dad because of a tape he had bought, and he didn't want him listening to it," Von Wald said.

2. Demonstrate three ways to show respect to the Flag.

SOME WAYS TO RESPECT YOUR FLAG

1. Do not dip the Flag of the United States to any person or thing.

2. Do not let the Flag touch the ground or floor, or anything else that will tear or soil it.

3. Do not use the Flag as drapery—use red, white and blue bunting instead.

DO'S

THE DEPRESSING TRUTH

1. When wearing your uniform while watching a parade, give the Cub Scout Salute whenever a Flag of the United States passes. If not in uniform, hold your cap in your right hand over your heart.

2. During a ceremony of raising or lowering the Flag, face the Flag, stand at attention and, if in uniform, salute.

3. An old or worn-out Flag should not simply be cast aside. Destroy it, respectfully. It is best to burn it in private.
